

TC3™ INTERNATIONAL SERIES ANNOUNCED FOR 2015

Introducing a new global Touring Car racing championship – the TC3™ International Series – which has been announced for 2015. The exciting new series aims to restore the 'Touring Car Pyramid' concept of cars that can compete at national, regional and international level and will appear in several Formula One™ events.

Not only will the cars look impressive but they will be capable of delivering a strong performance, while development and running costs will be kept under control to make the series affordable for private teams.

The technical principles follow the GT3 philosophy. Performance of the different cars will be regulated through a Performance balance system.

Major car makers have in their range models that may be eligible for competing in this series that is deliberately aimed at creating a strong customer market for the cars while developing a worldwide racing product at the pinnacle of Touring Car racing.

In all, there will be in excess of ten race meetings over four continents. Some of these will be run within F1® events, ensuring a massive global audience and strong media coverage will be exposed to the series in its very first season.

A sister TC3™ Asia Series will be organised as well, that will be sharing some of the events with the International Series.

Stay tuned to hear further details about the TC3™ International Series and its 2015 calendar that will be announced shortly.